

South Dakota Grazing Exchange

Connecting Crop and Livestock Producers to Improve Soil Health

sdgrazingexchange.com

Do you own land or have pasture, native grass, crop residue or cover crops available to be grazed? Or do you need extra grazing land or forage for your livestock this year?

Introducing...

the South Dakota Grazing Exchange, created by the South Dakota Soil Health Coalition! The SD Grazing Exchange website is a free, publicly accessible map that offers a platform for producers to connect throughout the state and region, with information categorized based on forage and livestock grazing opportunities.

Integrating livestock onto cropland and proper management of Grasslands are a key part of increasing overall soil health, so we created an online portal to help livestock producers find the right land for their herd, or landowners and operators find the right herd to graze their land.

It's Easy To Get Started

VISIT:
sdgrazingexchange.com

First, click the "Create Account" button in the top right corner of your screen. Enter your email, name and phone number before creating a password and accepting the terms and conditions.

Create "pins" entering information about the land you have available for grazing or the livestock you are willing to re-locate for grazing.

The map overlay shows sites where fields are available for grazing, as well as livestock producers with animals they are willing to move to grazing sites. Click on the markers for additional information that has been entered by the account holder about the field or herd, or to transmit your information and a short message to that account holder.

Connect with other producers to work out the details and improve soil health!

Additional fact sheets and contracting resources also included on the website.
